LEADER: Bruce Matheson Maps: L164 or E180/191

Well rested from our first rest day, we have an easy walk today to get us back into the swing of things. After leaving the Chiltern hills, today is largely flat, walking through the Cherwell Valley to our destination of Bicester. We set off north through Oxford city centre, and out of the city through Cutteslow Park, heading to Islip for lunch. After lunch, we make our way to the M40, which we cross for the first time as we follow it up towards Birmingham. After a stop in Wendlebury, we shortly find ourselves in the village of Langford on the outskirts of Bicester.

We start today by heading into Bicester for our Eucharist, before setting out for another long day. Despite its length, it is easy going all day, and after a rest and a short day we should all hope to be fit enough to tackle it. We have a rather late lunch, due to the lack of large Pubs in this very rural area. Again we cross the M40 and the Cherwell river on our way into Banbury along the Oxford Canal.

Yet another day on the long side, but again we have an easy going route, spending the majority of the morning on the Oxford Canal. We leave the canal once for a church stop and then the second time to head west to our lunch stop in Farnborough. After this we have a longer afternoon, making our way to Avon Dassett before joining the Centenary Way over the Burton Hills and north to the village of Harbury for our deserved night's rest.

If castles are of interest, then this day has a couple of some importance. We leave behind the castle at Warwick, making our way across the racecourse out along the canal before heading north out of the town. After a stop at Leek Wootton, we make away around the new side of Kenilworth to the castle, before heading in to the Virgin and Castle in old Kenilworth. We then follow a dismantled railway for much of the afternoon before heading cross country to Berkswell, and then onto Hampton-in-Arden; a hall familiar to those who walked in 2000.
